To Whom It May Concern,

The Missing Link was engaged by Atlassian to perform a code-assisted web application penetration test of the Analytics Visualization Platform (AVP). AVP allowed customers to connect to different data sources and use it to create several graphical analytics objects including dashboards, charts, and graphs.

The objectives of the engagement were to identify exploitable vulnerabilities, subvert standard workflows, gain unauthorised access to the application, sensitive information, or user generated content, and attempt an underlying server compromise.

Automated and manual penetration testing was performed by three security consultants between 30th of March and 21st of April 2023 against cloud staging environments, and local development instances of the Analytics Visualization Platform and backend infrastructure. A white-box methodology was followed, with full access to all source code, development guides, and the Analytics Visualization Platform engineering team to ask questions of.

Sincerely,

The Missing Link Security Pty Ltd
